CONFIDENTIALITY OF GENERAL INSURANCE DATA

On 22 February 2013, APRA released a discussion paper on proposed changes to its general insurance statistical publications and on the confidentiality of general insurance data submitted to APRA.<sup>1</sup>

In the discussion paper, APRA proposed to enhance its general insurance statistical publications to better meet stakeholders' needs for more detailed and timely statistics. APRA also proposed to determine that all data submitted by general insurers are non-confidential and therefore would be publicly accessible. The consultation period for submissions to be made to APRA closed on 5 April 2013.

On 21 May 2013, APRA released a response letter which noted it would implement the improvements to the general insurance publications as proposed, with minor amendments to include additional statistics sought by respondents. APRA released the first of the improved publications, the Quarterly General Insurance Performance Statistics (QGIPS) publication, for the March 2013 reference period in May 2013. APRA further improved the QGIPS publication for the September 2013 reference period by including state-level premiums and claims expense in the release on 28 November 2013.

During 2013, APRA undertook extensive further consultation with industry to clarify the submissions received in response to the discussion paper. APRA subsequently released a response to the consultation on 11 December 2013, outlining that certain data had been determined non-confidential.<sup>2</sup>

This letter outlines APRA's final response to the consultation, with APRA now having made a decision on the confidentiality of the majority of data proposed to be determined non-confidential in the February 2013 discussion paper.

Confidentiality of data

The February 2013 discussion paper sought feedback on APRA's proposal to determine all data submitted by general insurers to be non-confidential.

Section 57 of the APRA Act provides that APRA may, by legislative instrument, determine that data submitted to it by entities under section 13 of the Financial Sector (Collection of Data) Act 2001 (FSCOD Act) contains or does not contain confidential information. APRA may determine data to be non-confidential if "APRA considers that the benefit to the public from the disclosure of [the data] outweighs any detriment to commercial interests that the disclosure may cause".

Representations received on the discussion paper

Several submissions on the discussion paper generally supported the principles behind APRA's proposals to determine data non-confidential, with a few submissions indicating that it would be desirable to make most of the data accessible by determining it non-confidential.

Some submissions suggested that a second round of consultation would be necessary to properly consider and gauge the effect of determining data to be non-confidential. Following its initial consideration of submissions, APRA invited the industry bodies and other entities that had made submissions to make additional representations to clarify their submissions. APRA also met with industry representatives and other stakeholders to discuss its proposals and obtain further feedback in September 2013, October 2013 and January 2014. Following this additional consultation, further representations from industry were received in April 2014.

December 2013 response

As outlined in the December 2013 response to submissions, having considered all of the feedback on data confidentiality, APRA implemented a phased approach to the determination of data to be non-confidential and hence the publication of non-confidential data.

In December 2013, APRA had determined data that are the source of the statistics in the General Insurance Institution-level Statistics (GIILS) publication, and which industry suggested would not be detrimental to their commercial interests to disclose, to be non-confidential. The data that APRA determined non-confidential under section 57 of the APRA Act in December 2013 are listed in Appendix A.

June 2015 response

APRA indicated that it would weigh up the public benefit and commercial detriment of the remaining data proposed to be non-confidential in the February 2013 discussion paper. APRA has now made a decision about the confidentiality of the remaining data, giving careful consideration to the representations received from interested parties.

Where APRA has determined data to be non-confidential, this decision was made on the basis that the public benefit from disclosure clearly outweighs any detriment to commercial interests that the disclosure may cause.

Where it was not clear on current evidence that the public benefit of disclosure outweighs commercial detriment that disclosure may cause, APRA has made no decision on the confidentiality of the data at this time. For these data, APRA will continue to apply confidentiality protection measures for industry-level publications to ensure that confidential information relating to an individual institution cannot be derived from APRA's published statistics. APRA may in the future review its position on such data having regard to any new evidence and/or industry or regulatory developments.

In relation to class of business data, APRA notes the arguments put forward in some of the submissions against class of business data being made non-confidential, as well as other submissions that argued in favour of non-confidentiality. APRA is not entirely convinced by the arguments against the data being non-confidential and the commercial detriment it could cause. APRA intends to further analyse and test the strength of these arguments and undertake additional consultation on the disclosure of class of business data before making a decision about the data's confidentiality. APRA intends to undertake the consultation over the next year. In the meantime, APRA has made no decision on the confidentiality of class of business data and will continue to treat the data as confidential.

The data that APRA determined non-confidential under section 57 of the APRA Act through the determination signed on 12 June 2015 are listed in Appendix B.

Next steps

APRA appreciates the feedback provided to date by industry and other stakeholders. We would also encourage industry and other stakeholders to continue to review the information that is published for accuracy and consistency, so that the quality of the data collection and publications is enhanced over time.

Yours sincerely
